

hepatitis A

Hepatitis A is most commonly spread by eating food that was touched by somebody who did not wash their hands after going to the bathroom.

hepatitis B

Hepatitis B is spread when the blood, semen, and/or vaginal fluids of a person living with hepatitis B enters the body of another person.

hepatitis C

Hepatitis C is spread when the blood from a person living with hepatitis C enters the bloodstream of someone who does not have it.

PREVENTION, TESTING, AND TREATMENT ARE AVAILABLE

Anybody can get hepatitis A, B, and/or C.

To prevent the spread of hepatitis B and C, be sure to:

- Use your own personal hygiene items - don't share razors, toothbrushes, nail clippers, etc.
- Use barrier methods during vaginal, anal, and oral sex.
- Use new and clean equipment for tattooing.
- Use new injection, smoking, or snorting equipment.

The best way to prevent hepatitis A and B is by getting vaccinated.

If you need a vaccine, speak with a healthcare provider or find a pharmacy at hepcap.org

There is no vaccine for hepatitis C.
...but there is a CURE!

- Medications are available to treat hepatitis B and to cure hepatitis C with little to no side effects.

Most people don't have any hepatitis B and C symptoms, so get tested!

Community Feedback for Philadelphia’s Hepatitis B & Hepatitis C Elimination Plan Dissemination Strategies

The Philadelphia Department of Public Health is composing a hepatitis B and hepatitis C elimination plan with the support and input of subject matter experts, communities, advocates, and people affected by these diseases. It is imperative that the voices of the Philadelphia community are incorporated into the plan to ensure it addresses the challenges and leverages the strengths that make Philadelphia unique. As an individual or organization that works with communities and individuals affected by hepatitis B and/or hepatitis C, we ask for your help to best engage your networks.

To that end, we ask you to please share our 5-question survey with your networks that asks about healthcare experiences and elimination in Philadelphia. There are multiple options for disseminating the survey included below, including a link for web-based completion, printable pdf versions, QR codes, and social media dissemination.

All materials are provided in English, Spanish, French, Chinese, and Vietnamese. A Community Outreach Executive Summary is included and a social media post example is provided, as well.

If there is another medium that will work better to reach your community, please email us at HEP-DDC@phila.gov and we will work with you!

If you are interested in following the Elimination Planning process on social media, the PDPH and Hepatitis C Allies of Philadelphia (HepCAP) handles are listed below. Messages will be posted throughout the Fall and repost if you’d like!
